Choose the right wire for your sculpture. Steel wire is the cheapest, so probably the best to use as a beginner or for mock-ups before making the final sculpture. Copper wire is another option, but more costly. Stay away from shiny or galvanized wire, which can give off toxic fumes if heated.

How to Do a Wire Sculpture | Our Pastimes

Lastly, once you have mastered the basics of wire sculptures, you should consider the idea of mixing both high and low gauge wires for a more complete sculpture. Say you are making a giraffe, you can use a lower gauge wire for the body, but then capture the delicate neck and head by using a lower gauge wire.

Sculpting Basics. I get so many ... Copper wire has to be crimped with nippers at the joints or it won't bend cleanly, so I don't use it often. For Nanning, since this is a very complex pose and I didn't have the opportunity to measure him in person, I blew up the photo for the pose to about the size I want the sculpture to be.
