Waterloo A Near Run Thing

Waterloo: A Near Run Thing. The first shots were fired at about eleven-thirty on a Sunday morning in June, 1815; by nine o'clock that night, forty thousand men lay dead or wounded, and Napoleon had abandoned not only his army, but all hope of recovering his empire.

Waterloo: A Near Run Thing by David Howarth

Waterloo is one of my favourite battles in history and I have read a ton of books on it but the three best and must haves are Bernard Cornwell's non-fiction book, Barbero's The Battle, and A Near Run Thing. If you want a Waterloo book that is not overwhelming detail but still enough for you to learn about the battle, and a dang good read, this is that book.

What is the meaning of Wellington's quote, in modern vernacular, of "the nearest-run thing you ever saw in your life", when referring to Napoleon and the Battle of Waterloo?

What is the meaning of Wellington's quote, in modern ...

It has been a damned nice thing — the nearest run thing you ever saw in your life. The history of a battle, is not unlike the history of a ball. Some individuals may recollect all the little events of which the great result is the battle won or lost, but no individual can recollect the order in which, or the exact moment at which, they occurred, which makes all the difference as to their value or importance.
